SINTRA

PENA NATIONAL PALACE

In the mountains of Sintra, in the parish of São Pedro de Penaferrim, you can find one of the seven wonders of Portugal. The National Palace of Pena is a prime example of 19th century Romantic architecture. This imposing monument is open all year round to sightseers.

MOORISH CASTLE

Built on solid rock, high up on the walls of the Castelo dos Mouros there is a spectacular view to be had of the whole of the Sintra area that extends to the Atlantic Ocean. Built during the 9th century by the North African Moors, this castle served to guard the town of Sintra.

QUINTA DA REGALEIRA

Located in Sintra's historic centre and classified as a World Heritage Site by UNESCO in 1995, Quinta da Regaleira is endowed with a romantic style shrouded in mysteries, secrets and legends. It is regarded as the most significant and imposing of Sintra's symbolic monuments.

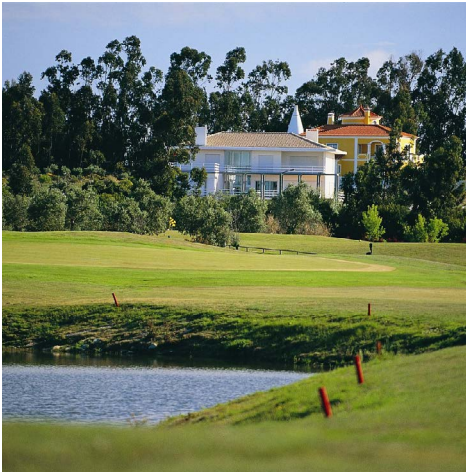

NATIONAL QUELUZ PALACE & GARDENS

With its iconic harmony between scenery and architecture, the Queluz Palace was the royal residence in the 18th and 19th centuries. It houses a large Equestrian Art Library, and has won international awards for the restoration of its botanical gardens.

CABO DA ROCA

The westernmost tip of mainland Europe, with its sea cliffs battered by waves, and a lighthouse which watches over the tide. A fantastic view out over the Atlantic Ocean completes the experience.

GOLF

The Beloura Pestana Golf Resort (pestanagolf.com/pt/golf/beloura/) is a 60 hectare 18-hole course and lake, situated in the foothills of the Sintra Mountains. Surrounded by eucalyptus, pine, magnolia and palm trees, it was designed by the American architect Rocky Rogmore and also includes a golf shop, gym facility and clubhouse.

HIKING

There are a series of pedestrian paths marked out across the region which pass by points of interest such as fountains, churches, palaces and the Moor castle. For those who prefer a more radical approach, have a go at climbing: the Sintra Mountains rise to over 500 metres for exploration.

CUISINE

Both in Sintra and in Cascais one finds an entire world on the dining table. There are regional and international restaurants, including the highly popular Asian and Italian cuisines. But tradition dictates one to try out local specialities, preferably in the company of wine produced only in this region: the liqueur wine of Carcavelos and exclusive wine of Colares.

In Cascais, the top quality super fresh fish and seafood are top billing, the soups and broths and popular sweet products, in particular a type of sugar-coated biscuit known as 'areias'.

In Sintra, don't forget to try the Negrais suckling, roast veal or octopus dishes. At the pastry shop, the 'queijadas' (cheese muffins) and 'travesseiros' (sweet pastry wrap) have already gained fame.
